What is Zombie hunting?

Zombie hunting is a systematic approach to hunt down initiatives that are wasting critical company resources.

Organizations that create a habit of identifying and shutting down initiatives that are not adding enough value will significantly increase their speed of innovation. They will have the freedom of only focusing on the most valuable work.

"What you don't do determines what you can do"
- TIM FERRIS

Before hunting Zombies

After hunting Zombies

Assessing your innovation graveyard

You can assess your level of innovation by looking in your innovation graveyard. Do projects only die of natural causes (they were so bad that it was obvious to everyone that the project needed to be retired)?

Or do you kill projects that aren't good enough? They might create value but not enough of it, and you know that you can use the same resources to create something even better.

UNLOCKING SPEED AND INNOVATION

someone who isn't emotionally attached to the subject matter to help you discuss potential zombies. This could be an individual from a different department or someone outside the organization.

And once you identify some zombies, you've got four options of how to handle them.

- If you didn't at the beginning, create pivot indicators now.
 - This can be challenging in the middle of an initiative, but try to answer "how will we know if this isn't working?" and "when will we know?" Schedule a time to review these pivot indicators in a month or a quarter.
- Sometimes the extra space will help people see the project objectively.
- Pivot
 - If you must continue on, is there a way to shift your approach and try something different?
- Test the Kill
 - If it could be killed, try it out. See if anyone misses it and reassess after a specific timeframe.
- Kill it!
 - If the zombie can be killed, kill it for good! After shutting it down, you'll want to celebrate this by communicating with the entire team or organization! This celebration will reinforce the importance of speaking up, learning from mistakes and not wasting resources.
